

MISS URQUHART, ACTRESS, IS DYING

She Caught a Cold in Rochester and Was Sent to a Hospital.

Isabelle Urquhart, the actress, is reported dying in the Hospital. She was playing there at Cook Vaudeville Theatre, appearing with Arnold Day in Bernard Shaw's one-act play, "How He Lied to Her Husband."

Winchell Smith, manager of the Herald Square Theatre today received word from the superintendent of the hospital that her condition was very critical today.

The actress caught a cold Thursday night, but refused to give up her engagement, using the aid of stimulants until her condition had developed to a point where she was removed to the hospital. The physician pronounced it hopeless. Her death is expected at any moment.

Isabelle Urquhart was born in this country, although her parents were Scotch. She began her stage career as a chorus girl in "Billie Taylor," at the Standard Theatre. Her stage career began her prominence. Later she appeared in "Geminis," and then understudied Lillian Russell at the Casino in "The Brigades." As a result of the arrangement which was made in the company, at one night the two actresses shared the stage which caused some excitement.

In the interim between comic opera engagements she played utility parts in Augustin Daly's company and also with Lawrence Barrett. While a member of the Mr. Barrett's company touring in Australia she met Guy Staalberg, who she married in London on Feb. 20, 1905. She is said to have a divorce here in 1906. Since then she has played in vaudeville and lately has appeared with Arnold Day in Bernard Shaw's play.

Ms. Urquhart was a chum of the late Sylvia Griffith, who recently died in the old mansion in Fort-Liberty. The two actresses fought over Lottie Fuller.

CAME FROM BANQUET AND DIVED TO DEATH

John Christman Found Dead in Front of Home After Entertainment.

John Christman, forty-seven years old, of No. 47 Halsey street, Brooklyn, fell off the stoop at his home early today and fractured his skull. He was rushed to St. Mary's Hospital, but died by a few minutes. He had been attending a banquet at the Hotel Astor last night, and it was early in the morning when he reached his home.

It was late, and slipping, he fell down half a dozen steps. Mr. Christman was a well-known leather merchant, whose place of business is at No. 29 Spruce street, Manhattan Borough.

At Mr. Christman's home it was learned that he was at the banquet given last night by the Hide and Leather Association, of which he is one of the charter members. He did not leave the banquet hall until after midnight, and at that time he was accompanied by a friend who said that he would go to Brooklyn with him.

Christman was a son of Emma, his firm, Christman, Wolfenstein & Shanshan, is one of the oldest leather con-one of a large body of police there might have been a serious panic.

Percy Williams, one of the managers of the theatre, said that a delegation representing the Irish societies of Kings County, called on him before last Monday and objected to the presentation of the Russell Brothers' act. He had gone over the act with them and pruned out many features of the horseplay that were objected to. On Monday the delegation visited the theatre, he said, and afterward declared they were satisfied.

WRECKED, WALK ALL NIGHT

Large Captain, Wife and Crew. Stranded on Island in Sound.

GREENWICH, Conn., Feb. 1.—Capt. C. E. Scouten of the steam barge S. L. Clarke, with his wife and crew of three, have arrived here, after spending Wednesday night pacing the shore of an island in the Sound, waiting for daylight.

The barge, with a cargo of plaster, was bound from New York to Stamford, Conn. Capt. Scouten lost his course and his craft struck the rocks off Little Captain's Island.

All took to the lifeboat, and when they reached the shore they were compelled to walk briskly for five hours to avoid being frozen to death. At daylight they went to the light-house a mile distant and were made comfortable.
